

An aerial photograph of a beach with clear turquoise water. Numerous small, colorful boats are scattered across the water, some with long, thin lines trailing behind them. A larger boat is docked at a pier on the right side of the frame. The overall scene is vibrant and captures a coastal activity.

DEBORAH BLYTH

Uncut, untamed, beautifully imperfect, our Ocean Diamond collection

Deborah has collaborated with Cornwall's Ocean Diamonds, specialists in sustainably sourced marine diamonds, to create this collection. These raw diamonds are hugged by organic shaped settings in recycled 9 carat gold, as if nestling amongst the crevices on the seabed where they were found

from seabed to surface, nature's most precious gift just for you*

Ocean Diamonds started their journey to the sea billions of years ago. They are carried along through torrent and flow by the patient power of rivers until they eventually settle between gullies or become hidden within the seabed. Only the strongest diamonds survive this journey and are discovered by diamond divers, off the west coast of South Africa. Consciously sourced and carefully certified, they are then passed on to skilled artisans who preserve their untamed nature

A story of courage, discovery; depth and radiance. These diamonds are wild, brilliant and deeply compelling; a chance to carry the ocean with you, always

'I was completely drawn to these raw diamonds in all their natural beauty; this awe-inspiring story of nature. There has been no alteration by human hands, no cutting or polishing; their brilliant shine and faceted surface has been created entirely by their incredible journey to the sea. The sea has always had a huge influence on my designs, and I hope these wonderful ocean diamonds will connect the wearer to the powerfully healing effect of the sea'
